FEDERAL ELECTION 2021 POLICY PRIORITIES

Maintain and expand carbon tax exemptions for farmers

- Farmers and ranchers continue to face rising costs for producing food, in part due to climate change. When no alternative fuel sources are available to power farm machinery and food production, farmers and consumers are unfairly penalized by the increase to the price of carbon.

Revised carbon offsets criteria

- Many Canadian farmers were early adopters of on-farm technology and carbon sequestration practices. They should receive recognition for their measurable activities that began prior to January 2017, with ongoing flexibility for sustainable advancements and agricultural offset protocol verification.

Rebates and research

- A portion of revenue collected by the carbon tax should be invested into critical emission reduction projects specific to Canadian farms. To drive this effectively, farmers should have input into the current Climate Action Incentive Fund program.
